DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 1-22 have been examined.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

- (e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.
- 3. Claims 1,8-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Kobal et al ("Kobal", US 2004/0080545).

As per claim 1, Kobal teaches a computer based order management system comprising: (a) a computer having program memory, working memory, and data memory (Figure 1); (b) a graphical user interface operatively connected to the computer (Figure 4a); and (c) the computer being programmed for: (i) displaying an order form comprising a sequence of selection windows for receiving respective specifications of a custom product being ordered by a user of the system, the selection windows displaying specification options as defined by stored product data of the data memory ([0005] and [0018]); and (ii) at least some of the selection windows displaying restricted specification options dependent on previously selected specifications, for avoiding selection of inconsistent specifications by the user ([0005] and [0018])

As per claim 8, Kobal teaches the system of claim 1, wherein the order form further comprises an entry window for receiving a numerical specification element, an associated selection window being selectively disabled depending on comparison of the numerical specification element with a predetermined value ([0026]).

As per claim 9, Kobal teaches the system of claim 8, wherein the associated  $\omega$  selection window has set of selection options, a subset only of the selections being disabled in response to entry of the numerical specification element ([0026]).

As per claim 10, Kobal teaches the system of claim 8, wherein the associated selection window has a default setting, the default setting being dependent on user input at the entry window ([0023]).

As per claim 11, Kobal teaches the system of claim 1, wherein the selection windows include a selection button, the computer being further programmed for changing the specification options in another of the selection windows in response to operation of the selection button ([0026]).

As per claim 12, Kobal teaches the system of claim 1, wherein one of the selection windows has a default setting, the default setting being dependent on user input at a different selection window ([0023]).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

- 4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:
  - (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.
- 5. Claims 2-7, 14-22 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kobal et al ("Kobal", US 2004/0080545) in view of Artinger ("Artinger", US 6,873,958).

As per claim 2, Kobal fails to expressly point out the order form being remote. However, Artinger teaches the system of claim 1, further comprising a network interface for permitting the graphical user interface to be remotely connected to the computer (Column 2 lines 16-48). Therefore it would have been obvious to an artisan at the time of the invention to combine the teaching of Artinger with the system of Kobal. Motivation to do so would have been to provide a user with unique capabilities above and beyond an individual machine, such as data sharing and communication capabilities.

As per claim 3, Kobal-Artinger teaches a system wherein the graphical user interface is directly connected to the computer, the network interface permitting plural counterparts of the graphical user interface to be operatively connected to the computer for access by multiple users (Artinger, Column 2 lines 16-48).

As per claim 4, Kobal-Artinger teaches a system, wherein the network interface is implemented for communication over a publicly accessible network (Artinger, Column 2 lines 16-48).

As per claim 5, Kobal-Artinger teaches a system, wherein the publicly accessible network is the Internet (Artinger, Column 2 lines 16-47).

As per claim 6, Kobal-Artinger teaches the system of claim 4, wherein the computer is programmed for log-in of users for limiting access to the order form to authorized users (Artinger, Column 6 lines 22-30).

As per claim 7, Kobal-Artinger teaches the system of claim 2, wherein the computer is further programmed for transmitting the specifications ordered by the user to a remote facility for filling the order (Artinger, Column 3 lines 44-51).

As per claim 13, Kobal-Artinger teaches a computer based order management system comprising: (a) a computer having program memory, working memory, and data memory (Kobal, Figure 1); (b) a graphical user interface operatively connected to the computer (Kobal, Figure 4a) (c) a network interface for permitting plural counterparts of the graphical user interface to be remotely connected to the computer for access by multiple users (Artinger, Column 2 lines 16-48); and (d) the computer being programmed for: (i) log-in of users for limiting access to the order form to authorized users (Artinger, Column 6 lines 22-30); (ii) displaying an order form comprising a sequence of selection windows for receiving respective specifications of a custom product being ordered by a user of the system, the selection windows displaying specification options as defined by stored product data of the data memory, at least some of the selection windows displaying restricted specification options dependent on previously selected specifications (Kobal, [0023],[0026]); (iii) the order form further comprising an entry window for receiving a numerical specification element, an associated selection window being selectively disabled depending on comparison of the numerical specification element a predetermined value, for avoiding selection of inconsistent specifications by the user (Kobal, [0023], [0026]); and (iv) transmitting the specifications ordered by the user to a remote facility for filling the order (Artinger, Column 3 lines 44-51).

Claim 14 is similar in scope to that of claim 9 and is therefore rejected under similar rationale.
